Climbing mount Fuji from Fuji Subaru-Line (Yoshida trail) 富士スバルラインから富士山登山

We'd like to recommend to climb to Mount Fuji by Yoshida trail. It is popular route than other route.

Climbing 登山

■ Climbing season . . . Trails are open from early July to early September!

- The usual climbing season in summer is the period during which trails are open.
- Trails may be opened later than usual, depending on snow conditions.
- Please check if trails are open before you start climbing.

■ Ascent . . . Allow for ample time for ascent!

- A one-day climbing trip to the summit is dangerous because it makes climbers more vulnerable to mountain sickness and symptoms of low body temperature.
- It is recommended that climbers stay at mountain huts one night on the way to the summit.

■ Accommodation at mount Fuji on the Toshida Trail

- Reservation by telephone is necessary for staying at there. <http://www.mtfuji.jp/availablelist.php>(Japanese)
- There is no bath and man and woman are stay in the same room. The huts have only water of plastic bottle.
- Not accept credit card for payment.

■ Equipment . . . You must carry rainwear, cold protection, a head lamp and a map!

- You should check your equipment before departure for climbing.
- When you climb Mt. Fuji, higher than 3,000m altitude, you should be properly equipped, so that you can cope with a sudden weather change or unexpected delay in descending the mountain.

- < Necessary Equipment >
- Trekking shoes,
 - Rainwear: Separate type
 - Outer wear: Winter clothes,
 - Light: Head lamp
 - Underwear: Quick-drying underwear,
 - Water: About 2 liters of water (available for purchase at mountain huts),
 - Snacks: Snacks easy to take,
 - Money: Small change, cash
 - Trash Bags: Bags to bring trash back,
 - Cap / hat, and map

■ Weather . . . The summit has snowfall even in summer! Be careful of sudden weather changes.

- Temperature fluctuates due to the large difference in altitude between the 5th station and the summit (temperature lowers at a rate of approximately -0.6°C per 100 m of altitude). At the summit, the temperature is low enough to have snowfall even in the summer. When the wind is blowing, you will feel even colder at the same temperature (approximately -1.0°C wind chill per 1 m/sec of wind velocity).
- The difference in temperature between the foot of the mountain and the summit may exceed 20°C . When the wind is blowing, you will feel even colder. Make sure to prepare protection against the cold.
- In summer, dense fog or thunder/lightning occurs very often, increasing the risk of climbers losing their way or thunderbolt strikes. If you hear the sound of thunder, stop whatever you are doing and take shelter immediately.

■ Mountain . . . Sickness Drink water regularly!

- <Symptoms>
- Feelings of fatigue and listlessness, headache, dizziness, lack of appetite, nausea, vomiting, etc.
- < Prevention >
- Before departure, you should rest for one to two hours at the altitude of the 5th station so that you can adapt to a higher altitude
 - Walk slowly at a constant pace.
 - Take rests at regular intervals but not too long, so as not to get cold.
 - Drink water regularly.
 - Take deep breaths.
- < Post-sickness Measures >
- If your symptoms are serious, descend the mountain.
 - Keeping your body warm and take a rest.
 - If your condition worsens, go to the first-aid center

■ Mt. Fuji is a national park/ World Cultural Heritage site

- Removing animals, plants, and rocks, and graffiti are prohibited.
- Because this is a sacred mountain, public urination, defecation and littering are prohibited.
